SWEETHEART BANQUET SET TOMORROW NIGHT

U.T. President Here Today

On campus today is Dr. A. D. Holt, president of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. He was guest speaker for the 11:00 convocation and was honored by the administration and faculty at a noon luncheon in the Albert Pick Banquet Room.

Dr. Holt is a widely-known educator, a successful administrator, an author, and a highly sought-after speaker.

Earlier in the week another well-known educator visited the campus. Dr. Myron F. Wicke, general secretary, division of higher education, board of education of the Methodist Church, Nashville, spoke to faculty and administrators at a 4:00 p.m. Faculty Meeting.

Music Events Coming Soon

Trevecca students will have the opportunity to enjoy three evenings of musical entertainment.

Saint Olaf College A Cappella Choir from Northfield, Minnesota, will perform in concert at 8 p.m. tonight in War Memorial Auditorium.

The St. Olaf Choir is considered by many music critics to be America's foremost choir. Annual tours bring the Choir's music to the nation's most famous concert halls. International renown has been built by European tours in 1913, 1930, 1955, and 1957.

According to Dr. Olaf C. Christiansen, director since 1941, "the lasting purpose of the Choir is to strive for perfection in singing the eternal music of the Christian faith."

Adult tickets are now on sale at $1.50. Trevecca students may purchase student tickets for $1.00 and choir members receive a special rate of 75c. This concert is sponsored by the Nashville Lutheran Men.

Select students of members of the local chapter of the National Association of Teachers of Singing will give a public recital in the Fine Arts Auditorium Saturday evening, February 19th. Miss Christiana Speer will be Trevecca's representative in the concert. Miss Speer is a private voice student of Professor Ramon Unruh.

Students in piano and voice will perform at a public recital in Fine Arts Auditorium Tuesday, February 22nd at 8 p.m. The recitals were formally held on Friday evenings but have been changed due to working conflicts of many students. The recital will be formal dress and students will be excused during study hours to attend this academic function.

Approximately 220 persons will attend the all-school Valentine Banquet, the social highlight of the school year, tomorrow evening at 7 p.m. in the Inglewood Methodist Social Hall, 3511 Gallatin Road.

Mr. E. Drell Allen, dean of student life, has announced an extension of hours until 11:30 for those students attending the banquet.

Miss Joy Gordon, chairman of the event, declined comment concerning decorations, theme, or actual talent, since it is traditional that these be kept secret. However, according to Miss Gordon, "emphasis will mostly be placed on engagements. There will not be a special speaker as in the past. The evening will consist of special music, semi-professional entertainment and a few words from several select people. The banquet committee are doing a splendid job of planning for a different type of banquet this year."

Committees and members include: Table Decorations, Pat West; Scene, Robert Carter; Theme Wall, Alice James; Programs, Ruth McDowell; Publicity, Mary Francis Buckner.

The menu will consist of Roast Beef, Potatoes, Green Beans, Rolls, Salad, Tomato Juice, Tea and Pecan Pie.

Mary Meighan, a registered nurse and an active student, will depart next for Scotland this fall to continue her preparation for a nursing career as a missionary to South Africa.

Mary Meighan Named Missionary to Swaziland

Mary Meighan, senior class reporter and head resident of Bsd Robinson Hall, has received her missionary appointment to Swaziland, Africa. She learned this good news after meeting with the Mission Board in January during the Evangelistic Conference. Her plans now are to leave September 1, 1966 for Scotland, where she will spending time in preparation.

Born in New York City, Mary has lived in many of the fifty states due to her father's position as a corresponding press official. After graduating from high school in Miami, Florida, she came to Trevecca to prepare for some special vacation. Here during the Spring Lectures of 1958-59 with Rev. Jack Ford of England, she accepted a call to the missionary service.

Entering Baptist Hospital School of Nursing on full scholarship after a time at Trevecca, Mary became active in all phases of student life there. Her positions included Senior Class President and quartet member. She also received an achievement award as Senior Superlative.

Last year Mary returned to Trevecca to finish her A.B. She is majoring in Science with a religion minor. Her activities at Trevecca have been many. A hard-working C.W.A. and T.M.F. member, Mary has been a member of the A Cappella Choir for two years. This fall she received one of Trevecca's highest honors, election to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

An Academic Atmosphere

Among the fines issued at the end of every academic quarter, a charge for failing to observe study hours is often included. In order to avoid such fines, the student must be accounted for in a place of study between the hours of 6:45 and 9:15, on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday evenings. Theoretically, this policy is an excellent plan for keeping the students in an environment conducive to studying. Practically, however, this plan has not proved entirely successful. The reasons for the limited success of this plan are many. First, of course, is the fact that the typical student rebels to the idea that he must be forced to study. Secondly, the conscientious student sets up his own study schedule and needs no coercive measure to prompt him. Thirdly, the unconcerned enrollee completely ignores the time set aside for study.

The failure of the study hours theory does not lie in any of the above stated reasons, but rather in the general attitude toward studying on our campus. This general attitude, developed over a period encompassing many generations, seems to regard studying as a function somewhat subordinate to the available social and religious activities. The solution to the problem, then, lies not in a strict observance of a 2½ hour "quiet period" three nights per week, but in motivational and enthusiastic teaching and creating an intellectual proclivity toward learning.

The responsibility of creating such an environment must be delegated to the college faculty and to the intellectually inclined students. Faculty members should concentrate on establishing proper student-faculty relationships. In most cases, if the student is aware that he must produce, he will do so. If he knows that his term paper will not be accepted late or that the professor will not listen to his plea for a change in his quarter grade, then the student will eventually "shape up."

The "academic atmosphere" on our campus is improving rapidly. A greater percentage of names are appearing on the honor roll. Groups of students are discussing pertinent issues. Professors are encouraging objective discussion in the classroom. Both students and faculty are beginning to engage themselves in academic pursuit.

The climax to the improving conditions will be reached when our administrators will no longer need to concern themselves with the problem of providing a proper study environment. Whether this climax is reached in five years, twenty five years or never depends upon the concern of our entire college community.

Campus Etiquette, A Religious Matter

A University campus is an experience, and I recently had the delightful privilege of sharing 10 days of such an experience. Impressive buildings, beautiful landscapes and limitless facilities were there, but these were not what attracted me most, at least, not on this visit. It was the young people, students in the everyday act of campus life. This would not be so unusual in itself if it were not for the fact that I had to make comparisons with our own campus—and the outcome was disturbing.

The students of this university (Duke University in Durham, N. C., not a church school, although one-time church related) are not under any pretension to be religious, yet in their public campus conduct, they stood head and shoulders above a good deal of what we present to the public here at Trevecca.

I mean, the public could walk around the campus or visit the student quarters, the Student Center, etc., and not be embarrassed by improprieties, boisterous and raucous voices and the like. There was no promiscuous discarding of bottles, cans, cups, candy wrappers or other waste littering up the floors of the lounges or campus lawns. Cars were parked in prescribed areas. Moreover, students were considerate of strangers—I wasn't on the campus five minutes until a student stopped and asked me if he could direct me to my destination.

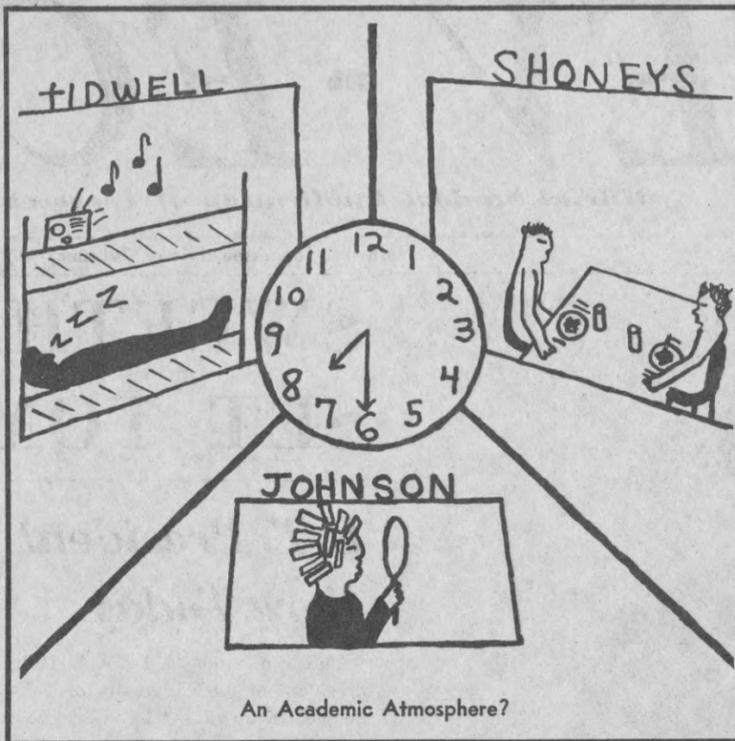

All that I have said is not to imply that the students of the other campus are more religious than we, or that everything I saw was to my liking, but, rather, I am raising the question, that being religious oughtn't we be more careful and sensitive to our relationships in the area where good social practice is demanded?

It is not a matter of "rules" after all rules only mark off the minimum limits of conduct which a society considers necessary in order to live together respectfully and harmoniously. The person of high ideals, socially as well as religiously, and good breeding is not bothered by rules, for in the final analysis, the rules represent a standard somewhat lower than that which he holds for himself. We might well examine ourselves, not so much as to our religious experience, but as to whether our religion is being expressed in the common, everyday courtesies that we owe to our fellowmen.

If the detail of campus etiquette is not essentially a question of being religious, then it must belong to the area of good social practice—the cultural heritage that grows out of our need to find the rationale by which a society can best work and live together—otherwise we would be animals. Our culture has determined what constitutes the rationale, and apparently Duke University's students have discovered it. Some of our public display of conduct raises a question at this point.

FORUM: RUSSIA AND RED CHINA

An issue of vital importance in the world situation today is the ideological split between Russia and Red China. This split is probably deeper than the Communists would like to admit. Some would think that the two nations have temporarily forgotten their differences because of the fighting in Viet Nam. But the split remains even though both are aiding the North Vietnamese.

The favorite saying in Peking these days is Russia has just ended "a year of Khrushchevism without Khrushchev." The split between China and Russia came during Khrushchev's reign as Premier. He believed that Communism could take over the world through "peaceful coexistence" with the capitalist nations. He believed that in time Communism would overtake capitalism and would dominate the world.

On the other hand, Red China expounded on the theory that Communism could win out only as a result of a direct conflict with the United States. They believe there must be revolutions all over the world in order for Communism, Chinese-style, to win out. An example of this is in Cuba. The year 1966 may produce more of these "Cuban style" revolutions.

Whether we realize it or not Russia and China are competing with each other for leadership of the Communist world. This is quite evident in North Viet Nam. Up until this year, China was looked to as the sole supporter of North Viet Nam. Although Russia attacked our "aggressive" action in Viet Nam, they did not send supplies to aid the Viet Cong. In the event of victory, the Communist world would look to China as its hero. Russia, realizing this, began to send supplies to the North Vietnamese which included badly needed surface-to-air missiles (SAM). These were to be used on incoming American bombers. It is debatable whether Russia would have sent these if it were not for their split with China.

In a recent meeting in Cuba the two nations made another attempt to dominate each other. On the whole it seems that Russia came out on the better end as they were able to put China in her place.

This new year, 1966, could be very important in the relations between these two countries and their effect on the policies of the United States. China is now preparing for what they think to be an inevitable invasion by the United States. Foreign Minister Chen Yi said, "We welcome an invasion by the United States." He invited us to bring the British and the revisionist leaders of the north (Soviet Russia).

It will be interesting to see what Russia does if the United States does invade China which doesn't seem feasible at this time. They have an agreement with China which would obligate them to defend China in case of attack. By doing this Russia would join against its policy of "co-existence" and would in direct conflict with the United States along with China. Only time will tell what will take place between the two world powers, and what effect they will have on the United States. It could be that Russia would align itself with America. Only time will tell.

Misdirected Idealism

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Misdirected campus idealism threatens "a real disservice to the national interest" in a little noted area, Lawrence A. Kimpton, of Chicago, said here today.

"The idea seems to be abroad on the campuses that personal challenge and the opportunity to make a meaningful contribution to society are nowhere to be found within a corporation," Kimpton said. "In my judgment this idea is both wrong and highly inimical to the best interests of the very society our young people quite commendably wish to serve."

A vice president of Standard Oil Company (Indiana) and former Chancellor of the University of Chicago, he spoke at Rockhurst College.

"However spooky some of the manifestations of the present campus unrest may look," Kimpton said, "they are at least higher up the intellectual ladder than devouring uncooked goldfish . . . and they bespeak a more thoughtful generation. To take the beatnik as truly representative may be to mistake a few saplings for the forest."

At the same time, he noted, "there is another very significant side to current student attitudes which has been given less notice than the militant protest activities.

"There is evidence that many, if not most, of today's undergraduates look upon the prospect of business careers with very little enthusiasm. Somehow they seem to equate corporate activity with sterility.

"The prospect of our most promising youth all hastening into research, teaching, government, and solving the problems of peace, poverty, and race relations, leaving to the pedestrian and second-rate the management of the economic engine on whose product all these other activities depend for their ultimate support is a sobering one," he added.

Kimpton said, "Guiding contemporary corporate affairs happens to be among the most challenging and exciting activities to be found anywhere in our society. The forces of rapid change are loose . . . and the corporation is the instrument by which scientific discoveries are converted into something of social value and utility and made available to all the people.

"For those of our young people who have the necessary intellectual capacity, the determination, and the vision that is called for," Kimpton said, "there are very few careers in life which can match the opportunity and the challenges to be found within today's corporation—nor are there many which involve as great a contribution to society.

"From some of the things we can see going on around us," he added, "it looks as if we have done a lousy job of getting young people to see business activity in this light, as they ride off in greater numbers in pursuit of assorted Holy Grails, without a backward look in our direction."

"Here we sit as the inheritors of an economic system which is one of the genuine breakthroughs in human history, and we apparently can't even explain its significance to those who are going to have to take it over the day after tomorrow.

"American business has badly neglected the responsibility of stating its case effectively, and we have done far too much talking to ourselves. It is high time we began communicating to others an understanding of the challenge and the promise of our economic system, which happens to be the best instrument yet devised by man for the creating of that better world which our young so ardently desire."

Phi Beta Lambda Is Organized On Campus

by Gary Streit

Recently, certain members of our student body who are preparing for careers in business education, saw the need for an organization that would assist them in their professional pursuits. Phi Beta Lambda seemed to be the organization which best filled the bill.

Phi Beta Lambda and College FBLA (Future Business Leaders of America) operate on the theory that business students in colleges and universities need and want an organization that provides for upgrading the members prior to their entrance into business or into the teaching profession. The activities of Phi Beta Lambda and College FBLA enables members to:

- Strengthen confidence in themselves and compete honorably with their associates
- Improve scholarship and develop qualities that will enable them to participate effectively in business, professional, and community life
- Interpret the role of business in America and acquire economic understandings
- Engage in individual and group projects of a business nature
- Recognize outstanding leadership in business and in business education
- Prepare for useful citizenship and make an intelligent choice of careers
- Work toward further improvement of business education programs in secondary schools and colleges
- Create school loyalty and help preserve the principles of democracy
- Develop leadership for business and business education.

The first charter for a college chapter of the Future Business Leaders of America was granted to Iowa State Teachers College (now State College of Iowa) on February 10, 1942. This chapter has remained active during the years and is now Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Lambda. In 1946, the National Council for Business Education and the Department of Business Education of the National Education Association merged to form the United Business Education Association. The National Office was established in the NEA center in Washington, D. C., with a staff headed by an executive director. Sponsorship of the Future Business Leaders of America organization was accepted at that time by UBEA and the organization became one of its major activities. On June 15, 1958, the National Board of Trustees approved the establishment of the College Division of FBLA.

Membership in a chapter of Phi Beta Lambda or College FBLA identifies the student with his future career. The three types of chapter membership are:

Active. A student who is regularly enrolled in a business subject in a college or university may become a member upon meeting the requirements in the provisions of the constitution and bylaws of the local chapter.

Associate. Following the termination of active membership status, a member may become an associate member by complying with the regulations and policies of the local chapter.

Honorary. Any adult who is helping to advance business education and the College Division of FBLA may be elected to honorary membership.

Each chapter of Phi Beta Lambda and College FBLA engages in many worthwhile projects. Some representative local chapter projects are the sponsorship of parliamentary procedures workshops, business education days, business-industry tours, business and business education conferences, and the like.

The remarkable growth of Phi Beta Lambda and College FBLA is evidence of the importance of this organization to business education.

Our local chapter of Phi Beta Lambda has been organized with an excellent staff of officers and a sponsor whose hearts are in this work. Larry Knight was elected President at the first meeting. Larry says "I am thrilled at the possibilities of our own Phi Beta Lambda. I feel that this organization can be an asset to our school and definitely to our new Department of Economics and Business Administration." Other officers are Wayne Downing, vice-president; David Minnix, treasurer; and Lonhita Hines, secretary. Dan Hatfield, a teacher in the Business Department, is the faculty sponsor.

Mr. E. Drell Allen, Dean of Student Life, is usually smiling when performing his many duties. Mr. Allen also serves as Director of Admissions.

Dean Allen Believes In Open-Minded Approach

by Ruth McDowell

Professor Drell Allen, Trevecca's Dean of Admissions and Dean of Student Life, is one of the busiest men around campus these days. His administrative duties plus his large class in Home & Family Living keep his hours full. About his new position as Dean of Students Professor Allen says, "It's an interesting job." He believes that several factors have helped to prepare him for some of the problems encountered as Dean. He has served several years as a military chaplain in the United States Air Force, spending 15 months in France. Then, too, four of his nineteen years in the pastorate were at Canadian Nazarene College as the college pastor.

Dean Allen graduated from Olivet Nazarene College and the Nazarene Theological Seminary with degrees in Religion. After years of pastoring in Michigan, Missouri, Minnesota, and Canada, he returned to school at the University of Minnesota where he completed his residence work for the M.A. in History. Prof. Allen is now active in the Army Reserve, holding the rank of Major. In keeping with this interest, he attended the National Security Seminar at Duke University early this year.

Commenting on the effect of the "New Morality" on a Christian college such as Trevecca, Dean Allen says, "There is no escaping the fact that our young people are affected to a small degree. Since the whole society is involved, they are already affected when they come to Trevecca. Our problems in coping with this situation will reflect those of the church as a whole."

Dean Allen believes that most students at Trevecca want to do the right thing. "It is our responsibility," he says, "to help them find sufficient avenues of expression—social, intellectual, and religious." One thing he is especially interested in is the discovery of new types of social activities for our students.

Working for "the best and highest welfare of the students," Dean Allen wishes his office not to be thought of as a negative power, but "as a means to provide the opportunity for a broader and more wholesome campus life."

Music Lovers Have Busy Week

Last week was a rewarding week for the music lovers of Nashville. A look at its events gives one an insight into just what Nashville offered to its citizens.

The Nashville Symphony Guild presented the Nashville String Quartet. The quartet formed in '63, has as its members Pierre Menard, Robert McMurray, Harvey Wolfe, and Arthur Lewis. This second annual "468 Series" was such a great success that it gives promise to the same at the next performance which will be given March 1.

Tennessee State University's second presentation in its Lyceum Series was also an outstanding feature of the week. The Krakow Choir and Orchestra was near perfect as they made their own rich musical literature with which we are so poorly acquainted come alive on a very high professional level for a responsive and highly appreciative audience. This was one of the most delightful and admirable offerings to come along in a long while.

The Lenox Quartet gave an excellent performance as it played for the third concert of the Vanderbilt University Chamber Music Series. This quartet, probably the youngest concertizing quartet in this country, proved themselves to be specialists of both contemporary music and the music of their own century. Their performance was a model of clean and well-balanced quartet playing.

Tonight the St. Olaf Choir from Saint Olaf College will present a concert under the direction of Olaf C. Christiansen. The program will begin at 8:00 p.m. in Nashville's War Memorial Auditorium. Many anticipate this to be one of the most inspirational events of the season.

BASKETBALL ALL-STARS NAMED WILEY, SEXTON COP TOP HONORS

by Larry Knight

The T.A.A., under the direction of President Bob Duncan, announced the election of All-Stars for the 1965-66 basketball season in chapel recently. This year's team consists of two Gammas, two Deltas and one Alpha. Don Wiley of the Gammas was named Most Valuable and Mike Sexton of the Alphas was named as the "best sport." Others making the team were Jim Knight of the Gammas, and Mark Greathouse and John Stark of the Deltas.

Wiley was the main cog in the Gamma offense this year. He has an assortment of moves around the basket and can also hit from the outside. He is also an outstanding rebounder which makes him even more valuable to the team. From his center position this year Don, a freshman, averaged 27.6 points per game which made him the leading scorer. He is an extremely aggressive player but does not draw a lot of fouls. On the other hand, he usually fouls the man out guarding him because of his excellent moves.

Sexton was the "big man" all year for the Alphas. They would have had a winning ball club if he had had a little help from his teammates. He was 3rd in the league in scoring this year with a 20.2 average. Mike, a husky six-four sophomore from Ashland, Kentucky, was also one of the better rebounders in the league. His quick moves around the basket led to many points for his teammates.

Knight, a senior making the team for the fourth time, had another excellent year for the Gammas. He didn't make the team on his scoring average although he could score if he shot more. It is his leadership and defensive abilities that make him outstanding. Standing six-two, he is one of the tallest guards in the league and sets up all the plays for the Gammas. He was captain of the team this year and had a big hand in the championship they won.

Greathouse is another repeater from last year's team. He was last year's Most Valuable Player and even improved his scoring average this year. Playing on potentially the best team in the league, he led them to a second place finish with an 4-5 record. Mark gets most of his points on layups and tip-ins, but can hit from the outside. The Deltas like to play him underneath the basket where he is more effective. He is probably the best rebounder in the league as he has a knack for getting good position on an opponent's shot.

Also representing the Deltas is John Stark. Many think that Stark could be the outstanding player in the league if he used his potential. He has the ability to drive for the basket and can score everytime he does so, but often times will pass off to a teammate rather than shoot. He is also an aggressive rebounder and has all the moves to score more than he does.

Those making the second team were Larry Knight of the Gammas, Jerry Cline of the Deltas and Al Baysinger, Don Webb, and Ken Walker of the Betas.

Women Choose All-Stars; Beverly Moore is M. V. P.

Girls Basketball was highlighted this year with some outstanding individual play and fine team leadership. Comprising this season's all-Star team was a list of three seniors, one sophomore, and two freshmen.

Beverly Moore—Among the Seniors that will be greatly missed next year is Beverly Moore, Alpha forward who has been on every All-Star team chosen since being at Trevecca. Leading her team on the offensive Beverly has been the team leader and captain. Beverly was also honored with the most valuable player award and the sportsmanship award.

Mary Blume—Leading her team defensively, another senior member and Alpha guard is Mary Blume. Opponents find it hard getting the ball passed around for the good shot with Mary constantly deflecting the ball away. She is considered the best guard in the league.

Eugenia Cloud—The last senior to be mentioned in this year's all-Star pack is Eugenia Cloud, Beta Guard. Eugenia has definitely been the most improved player in the league this year and also one of the top offensive rebounders.

Leading the Deltas to a second place finish this year on the offensive were Sandy Williams and Annette Harrison. These two formed the most potent scoring attack seen around here in a long time, as both had a dead-eye on the basket. Sandy and Annette were constantly setting picks and passing off to each other to make the easy lay-up.

Rounding out the first six basketball stars was Freshman Gamma forward Marvella Moore. Marvella was a tremendous team leader this year and was always dangerous from underneath the basket. One of the main reasons she is on all-star is her ability to play both forward and guard.

Making the second team all-stars, some of whom could just have easily been on the first team were Joyce Fullenwider, Marla Moore, Ladeane Russell, Stella Taylor, Kate Jones, and Brenda O'Neil.

All-Star Squad Racks Alumni

Coming back strong after last year's upset victory by the Alumni, this year's version on the 1965-66 T.N.C. All-Star team ran all over the Alumni by a score of 75-57. The All-Stars were paced by freshman Don Wiley with 20 points, followed by tall Ken Walker with 14 points and Larry Knight with 14 points. Playing without the services of two first stringers, Mike Sexton and Mark Greathouse, the All-Star squad never trailed and were never threatened after the first five minutes of play. Ed Sisson was the big gun for the graduates as he bucketed 20 points, receiving help from Tom Hardaway and Roger Costa with 10 and 6 respectively. Other All-Stars performing were John Stark, Jim Knight, Don Webb, Al Baysinger, Lester Bysington, and George Whitter. Everyone figured in the All-Star scoring attack. Also, playing for the Alumni were Coach Heaberlin, Prof. Strickland, Prof. Finger, Prof. Hatfield, Lowell Clyburn, Wayne Dollar, Roger Hord, and Howard Spruill.

Lady All-Stars Defeat Alumni

The 1965-66 Ladies All-Stars, led by forward Sandy Williams' 14 points, ran all over the hapless lady alumni, to score an impressive 25-7 victory. They were never in trouble throughout the contest as they demonstrated to the alumni and fans their good teamwork and playmaking. Beverly Moore added seven points to the All-Star total, with Annette Harrison and Ladeane Russell each chipping in two points. Other All-Stars playing were Mary Blume, Marvella Moore, Eugenia Cloud and Kate Jones. Scoring for the Alumni was rather well-balanced as Jane Cranshaw and Ray Kosher scored 4 and 3 points respectively. Also playing for the Alumni were Jean Cranshaw, Carolyn Hatfield, Sandy Tabers, and Joyce Fullenwider.
